Victims of sexual offences are entitled to psychosocial and legal assistance – if it is required by how much they were personally affected.

Legal representation ensures that victims' rights are protected and that claims are enforced in criminal proceedings.

The psychosocial legal support provides information on the course of proceedings, preparation for interrogations and protected support for reporting crimes and court proceedings.

Ideally, legal assistance begins before the incident is reported and ends after the court proceedings have been concluded.
